

Employment Opportunity for Clinical Psychologists

Breakwater Institute for Occupational Stress and Trauma is a psychology-led multidisciplinary clinic providing specialized mental health services to first responders and military members/veterans.

WHO SHOULD APPLY?

Experience assessing and treating operational stress symptoms in first responders and/or military service personnel is a definite asset, but applicants with excellent generalist clinical training and skills and an interest in working with this uniquely rewarding clinical population are strongly encouraged to apply.

Senior members of our team can provide mentorship and training in the field of operational stress, and facilitate external clinical and occupational-awareness training experiences.

WHY APPLY TO BREAKWATER?

We have a great team, beautiful offices, and plenty of other inducements – see below! – but our clients are far and away the best reason to consider joining us.

They are remarkable people, and they make every day at Breakwater rewarding. Breakwater clients tend to be intelligent, courageous, value-driven individuals who are determined to either preserve their mental wellness in the face of unavoidable operational stress, or regain peace of mind lost in the service of their community.

Why apply to Breakwater?

You can explore a range of clinical activities and shape your own career. If you're primarily interested in assessment and individual psychotherapy, you can focus your energies on those activities.

If you're intrigued by the idea of running peer support training groups, providing mental health education to first responder agencies, getting involved in personnel selection initiatives, or training and supervising clinical graduate students, there are ample opportunities to do so at Breakwater.

As we grow the Institute, we are integrating research, consultation, education, peer support training, couples and group interventions, and synergistic psycho-biological treatment approaches (e.g. rTMS, advanced neurofeedback practices) into our activities.

SECURE VIDEOCONFERENCING PLATFORM

We have a secure videoconferencing platform that creates opportunities for associates to provide some services remotely from home. We would be open to considering Ontario-based applicants outside of our geographical area who are interested in practicing purely remotely.

EXCEPTIONAL ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT TEAM

Our administrative support team handles booking and billing while providing warm, professional reception services.

GREAT LOCATION

Breakwater is headquartered in two adjoining historical buildings – 149 and 101 King St. West, Cambridge. These offices are centrally located near the 401 and are easily commutable from surrounding cities and communities, such as Kitchener-Waterloo, Guelph, and Hamilton. Interior spaces have been professionally designed, and offices are fully furnished and equipped with computers and phones.

WE PAY COMPETITIVE RATES

We offer our associates significant autonomy in terms of working hours. There is a very high demand for our services and we keep our associates as busy as they want to be.
